ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would like to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to the well-known theatrical author, scriptwriter, and director Giorgos Th. Tzavellas, (1916-1976) for his kindness in providing me with his personal material regarding the Greek cinema.

I am also grateful to Vasilis Georgiadis (1921-2000) for his contribution of considerable data with reference to my work. Vasilis Georgiadis was an editor and publisher of Greek Motion Pictures Almanac. In addition, he was a motion picture and television director of note.

For his interest and help with material for my work I would also like to thank the well-known prose writer, scriptwriter and film director, Nestoras P. Matsas.

I also wish to thank the editor and publisher of the Greek Motion Pictures Magazine Theamata (The Shows), Aeolos Varelas.

Finally, I am indebted to the author Lewis Girion, and Panagiotis Demopoulos of Los Angeles, California, for their kindness and their patient instruction in reading the manuscript of my work and correcting some errors.
FOREWORD

This work surveys the general view of the short, feature documentaries and short movies in Greece from 1900 to 2000. It considers not only the films themselves, but their political background from the period of their introduction in Greece to their eventual development. This work also is an attempt to depict what has been done with documentary productions over the pre-2000 period in chronological order. While there is rather meager supply of sources in United States, we have been fortunate enough to discover and use some important texts and sources of information.

In this work, we have tried, to the best of our knowledge, to research the scattered articles about the Greek short movies, and to put them in chronological order. We use in our work only movies that they are produced in 35 mm, 16mm, or super 16mm. If we have listed any video production in the movie index we apologize.

We divided our work in Chapter 1900-1975 and 1976-2000, Index of movies from 1900-2000, and the domestic and international festivals that the short movies and documentaries participated from 1900-2000.
HISTORY OF DOCUMENTARIES

In Greece

1900 - 1975

It took many years for the Greek producers, directors, scriptwriters and the government to realize the importance of documentaries (short or feature) and short movies.

Documentaries deal with facts of historical, scientific, sociological and cultural subjects, and intend to inform and educate the public. Documentary film is a very powerful form of propaganda and a very useful advertising tool. It is far more flexible in dealing with facts and even fantasy, and most important, documentaries are less costly to produce. It provides the viewer with facts, rather than studio productions. In our century, with the advance of television, documentaries can take the viewers everywhere in the planet as they comfortably in their own living rooms. If we ever ask what is the definition of the words “truth” and “fact,” the answer is documentary. Film, in general, is a window into the past, where the past comes to life visually and people can see history, mythology and every day events in action.

Jules Victor Schwerin and Philip Dunne state that in the early days (c. 1895) movies made in France, England and United States were “... pictorial journalism.” Jules Victor Schwerin also states that “... these films first came to be known as newsreel actualities.” It was in France in 1909 that Charles Pathe and Leon Fraconi started to produce them commercially. In the United States, it was the Thomas Edison Company. According to Lewis Jacobs “... the subjects were no longer limited to interesting bits of movement and action. The purpose was to inform.” Motion pictures before the establishment of editing were devoted to the film of facts and no manipulated actualities. Lewis Jacobs also states that the break-through in editing also drove the movies to a new direction.¹

As we mentioned above how powerful form of propaganda the documentaries are, the evidence indicates that the Nazi actress Leni Riefenstahl first directed in 1936 (for propaganda purposes) the Olympic Games in Berlin. Then while the Germans prepared for war, Leni Riefenstahl under her direction prepared propaganda documentaries. According to Jules V. Schwerin “... she did that to inspire their friends and terrorize their enemies.” To introduce the Nazi Party functions to the German people, Leni Riefenstahl produced the documentary Triumph of The Will (1934-36). According to Philip Dunne, the above documentary was a valuable source of Nazi material, and was intended to reunite the party behind Hitler after he had Ernst Rohm and associates murdered on the “Night of Long Knives.”²

During World War II, the movie theater screens were loaded with documentaries made by the Allies from 1940 until World War II ended. Britain and the United States produced a series of documentaries. Strange enough the early documentaries which were made in the United States were influenced by the Soviet ones. The director Frank Capra produced copiously for the United States War Department propaganda documentaries under the title “Why We Fight” series from 1943-1945.

According to Philip Dunne, Colonel Frank Capra's films are classics of their kind. Philip Dunne who had worked as a filmmaker overseas, stated that “Every film was made for the Overseas Branch of the OWI was built around a central idea, to make friends for America.”

The Soviets produced the documentary One Day of War in 1943. Several cameramen filmed the facts of what was happening that day in the streets and in the war front. Their second important documentary was The Story of Stalingrad, another pure facts documentary which was released abroad after World War II ended.4

In the post War period, the number of documentaries from every European country increased. The evidence indicates that documentaries were of equal importance as the entertainment feature movies. Documentaries flourished in Europe, and to a great extent, in the United States.5

Greek producers, directors, and scriptwriters were so preoccupied with the “New Art-Cinema” and the entertainment feature movies that they did not realize that a short or feature documentary is easier to produce, less costly, it can also use performers, and it can deliver massages just as well, if not more powerfully, as a feature movie. Documentary is a powerful weapon for whatever the producer, director and scriptwriter has in mind. Greece is so rich with materials from her glorious past as well as modern times that no producer, director, or scriptwriter can ever run out of themes for this kind of movies. The main reason that documentaries did not flourish in the first decades up to 1960 was because there was no market domestically or internationally for Greek documentaries.

The efforts to produce short or feature documentaries were almost zero for the first five decades of the 20th century in Greece. The only exceptions were the “Newsreels” of the Balkan War (1912-1913), World War I (1917-1918), and Asia Minor War (1919-1922) by cameramen Joseph Hepp, Demetris Gaziadis, Giorgos Prokopiou, Demetris Meravidis, and Gavrulis Longos. The World War II (1941-1944) and Civil War (1946-1949) by cameramen Joseph Hepp, Prodromos Meravidis, and Filopoin Finos.

The pioneer in that form was, as we have mentioned in our chapter II, (Volume 1) Charilaos Mavrogenis in 1911 who made a serious effort to produce what are known today as documentaries. He tried to produce the first scientific documentaries that dealt with insects and reptiles. In Balkans the pioneers were the Greek Miltiadis and Joachim Manakis with the documentary I Ifandres (i.e. The Weavers) in 1905. The next pioneer was Achilles Madras who in 1922 produced the documentary Prostiges Tou Polemou (The Refugees of The War). Other writers give the title The Exodus of Refugees. It presents the drama of a Greeks (Greeks) in Macedonian cities, West Thraki, and Smyrna. It was never released in Greece, but in Greek communities in the United States and Egypt. In Europe, it was released in France, Belgium, England, and Switzerland. Achilles Mandras’s documentary was an editorial review two hours long (editing the journals filmed by the cameramen Demetris Gaziadis, Giorgos Prokopiou and Joseph Hepp), the director of the Press Office, Konstantinos Kalapothakis, had sent Joseph Hepp to record the historical events in Thraki in 1919 and in Asia Minor in 1923 for the exchange of prisoners. Joseph Hepp, Demetris Gaziadis, and Giorgos Prokopiou, filmed the whole historical and most inhuman way the Turkish army treated the war prisoners and civilians. Fortunately, these documentaries are preserved in the “Elliniki Teniothiki” (Greek Film Archives) in Athens.

In 1928 the cameraman Demetris Meravidis made an effort to produce three short tourist documentaries. Two in 1928: Evia-Karyostos (Euboea-Karyostos) and Tinos, and the third one in 1933, Volos and Pelion. In 1938, another pioneer Mavrikios Novak, founder of Novak Film Company, produced the feature documentary Greece Tou 1938 Omili (Greece of 1938 Talks). As Nestor P. Matsas points out, “... this documentary was a skillful editing of different ‘talking’ newsreels from the whole year of 1938 and some new scenes were added to it for continuity.” It was a two-hour presentation of political events. It was presented with success in the United States under the same title. The “Novak Film Company” was established in 1921 as a film advertising workshop. Starting around 1936-37 it released a film every second week in a well-known series of film programs (newsreels) featuring the most important Greek events at that time. The title of the newsreels program was “Elliniki Kinematographiki Epitheorisis,” (Greek Cinema Review).

The period from 1938 through 1944 was unproductive, with the only exceptions the newsreels of World War II. It was not until 1945 that another feature documentary Exortmisis (The Sally) was released March 25, 1945, after the German occupation ended. It was produced (in 1942) by the group of Yannis Christodoulos (who was also the director and scriptwriter), Filopoinim Finos, Kimon Spathopoulos, and Chelly Wilson. Director of photography and cameraman was Prodromos Meravidis. Strangely enough, make-up man was Giorgos Stavrakakis instead of Kimon Spathopoulos. It was a historical movie which presented some of the most important events of Modern Greek history, from the beginning of Greek War of Independence of 1821 to the end of German occupation in 1944. Yannis Christodoulos, Kimon Spathopoulos, and Chelly Wilson took part in it.

The second short movie was O Doute Afigite (The Duce Is Narrating). It is the first animated cartoon made with the system papier de coupe in 1942 by the director Stamatis Polenakis; it was completed in 1945. Duce is narrating his victories which are the opposite of what is shown on the screen.

During the same year of 1945, the producer, director Yannis Christodoulos produced and directed, on his own this time, a short movie under the title Dio Tragoudia Stin Ellada (Two Songs for Greece), with director of photography and cameraman Prodromos Meravidis. This time it was the tenor Petros Epitropakis, Lalas Iakovidis and Ms. Kondopoulou that took part in it.

From the period of 1946 to 1949 only three short documentaries were produced, and one short movie. The short documentary Eroiki Kriti (Heroic Crete) produced by “Olympia Film” in 1944 with Elias Pergadis as a producer. It shows the ruins left in Crete after the war and the ruined German cemetery. It is the first Greek documentary to participate in the Cannes Film Festival of 1947. The second one was a short movie Siga Tous Keravnous (Gently on the Thunderbolts) produced and directed by Yannis and Giorgos Roussopoulos. The sketches were made by Pavlos Valasakis. This short movie was produced in 1946 but it was released in 1947. It is the second short movie ever to use the animation system with a camera that Yannis Roussopoulos had made. Their theme was based in the disagreements between Zeus and Hera.

Throughout the years 1950, 1951, and 1952 only one short documentary was produced per year. In 1950, the first short color documentary, Kos, was produced by the cameraman Prodromos Meravidis. It was a travelogue for the island of Kos and the everyday activities on the island. In 1952, Spiros Harokopos produced the short documentary for the city of Daphne, while the director and scriptwriter was Angelos Prokopiou (son of Artist 'Painter' and cameraman Giorgos Prokopiou in the early days of Greek Cinema). The director of photography and cameramen were G. Hoynigen-Huene and the veteran Joseph Hepp. Narrators were Ethel Barrymore and Maurice Evans, while for the English version the narrator was Aldus Huxley. The music was written by Howard Broubek. The director Angelos Prokopiou presented the historical work about the Byzantine Art of mosaics in 11th Century that still exist in one old Church in the area of Daphne.

According to Alida Demetriou in 1953 Roussos Koundouros established the Institute of Educational and Scientific Cinema. He made several scientific documentaries most of which have as their subject medicine, and the rest of them deal with everyday activities and tourism in different places. Roussos Koundouros made a total of forty-five documentaries during the period of 1953 to 1965. Nineteen of them dealt with surgery. In the year 1954, three short documentaries were produced. Two by Roussos Koundouros on the subject of surgery, and Kerkira (Corfu) produced by “E.K.T.” directed by Yannis Panayiotopoulo and who made a total of fourteen short movies from 1953 to 1967. The following year, 1954, three short documentaries were produced again. Two of them were Tragodia Ton Nision Mas (The Tragedy of Our Islands) and Thessaly. The first one dealt with the earthquake of Cephalonia and the big fire on the Kerkira (Corfu). Thessaly was a historical documentary of that area. Both were produced and directed by the newcomer Nikos Koundouros who a year later, 1955, will make his successful debut as a director in the feature movie Magiki Polis (The Magic City).

During the five-year period (1955 -1959), the production of short documentaries was uneven, with only one short documentary produced in 1955, six in 1956, eight in 1957, and sixteen in 1958. Then it decreased again to eight in 1959. It was not until 1957 that the short documentary Rock and Roll (Under the Title: Athens Dances Rock and Roll), was produced by a new-comer Klearhos Konitsiotis. The director and cameraman was Vasilis Maros who gives the picture of the social and political aspects that this kind of music represents. The same year, 1957 Vasilis Maros came out with his own short movie Kato AP Tous Ouranoxistes (Under the Skyscrapers). During 1957 to 1991, Vasilis Maros made a total of 19 short movies. According to Aglae Metropoulou (p. 426), Loen Losios directed his first short documentary Psarades Ke Psaremata (Fishermen and Fishing). There is no record that this documentary was released that year. It participated in the Thessaloniki film festival in 1961. In 1957, out of eight short documentaries that were produced, one of them was Hydra by Diana-Film Company, and a certain “scientific” short movie by the amateur Christos Stathatos and Roussos Koundouros. These two film-makers received the first prize in the First International Festival of Amateur Film makers.

The following year, 1958, the production doubled to 16 short movies and documentaries. The first one was Sparta and Mystras, produced by Elias Pergadis and directed by Errikos Thalassinos. The second one was the short documentary Lefkas to Nisi Ton Pieton (Lefkas the Island of Poets), produced by the Greek Tourist Organization and it was directed by Roviros Manthouinis, while director of photography and cameraman was Fotis Mesthenios. It commemorates the mythology and the poetic tradition of Lefkas where two great poets, Aristotelis Valaoritis and Angelos Sikelianos, were born. The third one was Kos to Nisi Tou Ippokrati (Kos the Island of Hippocrates, produced by Prodromos Meravidis and directed by Takis Meletopoulos. The fourth one was Mykonos, produced by Klearhos Konitsiotis and directed by Roussos Koundouros. The following year, 1959, we notice a decrease with only 8 short movies produced. The “Olympic Film Company” with Elias Pergadis as a producer came out with a noteworthy short movie O Mikros Drapetis (The Young Fugitive). The newcomer director Giorgos Dizikirikis, with Petros Michalelis wrote the script. In this sentimental story, the leading actor was the young boy Evangelos Ioannidis, and his faithful friend, a dog named Fideli. The young boys Christos Menidas, Yannis Kalatzopoulos, and the young girl Mirka Kalatzopoulou also participated. Giorgos Dizikirikis from 1968 to 1991 made 17 short movies.

A few documentaries were always made by the Greek Tourist Organization, which prescribed materials for publicity purposes and to inform audiences of statistical data, but had no artistic value, nor did they create an interest.

But someone will ask why for five decades Greek producers and directors did not produce short movies or short documentaries as in other countries? As we mentioned earlier in our work, they were preoccupied with the “New Art Cinema” and the entertainment of commercial feature movies. The second and most important reason not to produce a short movie or short documentary was the rejection of this genre by most first run major movie theaters which preferred only foreign short movies or documentaries. What is even more interesting is that many first run movie houses preferred second rate foreign short movies than first rate Greek productions. Several major film distributors were also theater owners and controlled the film market and distribution from day one. Unfortunately the Greek government all these years had overlooked this unfair situation until 1961 when it outlawed this system and suggested to the movie theaters to release at list two Greek short movies a month. But again that kind of law it was never enforced. Under those conditions, most producers and directors were not willing to risk their capital on short movies or short documentaries without any market of distribution domestically or aboard.

It was not until 1960 that we see a noticeable increase in short movies and documentaries. In 1960, seventeen short movies were produced. As we mentioned earlier, in April of 1959 the government promised financial support to Greek cinema for the movies selected by a government committee. After this point, conditions improved. The establishment of the Thessaloniki Film Festival in 1960 was another turning point for increasing production of short movies and documentaries. One should note that since 1960, new directors of short documentaries and short movies had three good things going for them. The establishment of the Thessaloniki Film Festival (Called in the early years ‘A Week of Greek Cinema’), the International film festivals, and government financial support for those works were selected by a government committee. Most of the short movies and documentaries were well made with their aesthetics. As we will see later, in subsequent years many new talented directors became interested in feature, or short documentaries and short movies. They did not only increase the quantity but they improved the quality with wide variety of social and cultural subjects. Some of them were very artistic and treated interesting political and sociological subjects. A sprinkling of good documentaries or short movies were produced with the aim that they could come to the attention of major producers and perhaps lead to furthering their careers.

The most devoted person in that line (short movies, short and feature documentaries) since 1960 is the producer, scriptwriter and director Nestor P. Matsas. A hard worker dedicated to promoting and presenting the Greek civilization, culture, and customs through documentaries domestically and internationally. Nestor P. Matsas is credited with more than one hundred twenty five documentaries since 1960 to 2000 and has received many domestic and international awards. Nestor P. Matsas is also the first one to introduce the ethnographic documentaries and the first one to introduce in Greek television folklore and ethnographic series, under the titles Laikos Politismos, (Folklore Civilization), To Perivoli Tou Laou Mas (The Garden of Our People), and Paradosi ki Zoe (Tradition and Life). He became a “Great Teacher” for the customs, culture, literature, art, traditions and folklore. Nestor P. Matsas gives the messages with his documentaries to the whole world. The actor Demetris Myrat had ones stated that “…through the work of Nestor P. Matsas, Greece existed, exists, and will exist.” Nestor P. Matsas with his artistic way in his short movies and documentaries has become also the poet of the Greek Nation and his work has been understood by all. Nestor P. Matsas is a well known author, scriptwriter and very skilful motion pictures director. His work in documentaries is forty years of research for people, their roots, strife’s, civilizations, and science.

The year 1960 marks the appearance of the new director Takis Kanelopoulos with a successful short documentary Makedonikos Gamos (Macedonian Wedding) with Vasilea Drakaki as a producer. Takis Kanelopoulos handled his subject in an excellent manner from a directorial point of view. The Greek heritage of traditions, customs, dancing, authentic costumes, and all the others elements combine were with Greek coloring, beauty, harmony poetic realism and unique truthful style. The wedding is the most imported event in the village and all its people participate in keeping the traditions of life over the centuries. This presentation was very successfully carried through by Takis Kanelopoulos who won the “First Prize Award” in the Thessaloniki’s first Film Festival in 1960. He and his movie were the most significant events of the film industry for that year.

The director Roussos Koundouros in 1960 came out with three successful short movies. One was Diethnis Ekthesis Thessalonikis (International Thessaloniki Trade Fair). It has to do with Thessaloniki’s Trade Fair activities. The second one was Edo Athena (Here Is Athens), and the third one was Anastenaria (Fire Walkers). Its plot is based on the semi-religious custom that people can walk barefoot on hot fires after praying and while holding the icon of Saint Constantine and Helen.

One more short documentary of note is Lesviaka Themata (Issues of Lesbos) directed by Leodis (Leon) Loisios. Leodis Loisios and cameraman Fotis Mesthenios touched very close the problems and expressions of the people of island Lesbos. Like any other island, it has its problems but it also has unique traditions and interesting people full of life. The hard work of picking olives, the celebration in the island’s fairs with dancing, singing and drinking was the subject of the film.

During 1961, a total of twenty-seven documentaries and short movies were produced. Out of those, fifteen applied for participation in the festival and only three were accepted. Included in the above were released by “Spectra Film Company” the following three documentaries: Psarades Ke Psarematata (Fishermen and Fishing), Zoe Stin Mitilini (Life in Mitilini), and Lesbos. They were all directed by Leon Loisios. The first one was with scriptwriters Costas Kehaidis and Giorgos Bakoyiannopoulos from a story by Costas Ananiadis. Although it was produced in 1957 it participated in the Thessaloniki Film Festival in 1961. The director of photography and cameramen was Fotis Mesthenios while the narrator was the actor Stavros Tornes. The first two documentaries presented authentically every day life of hard working fishermen of the island of Lesbos, the enjoyment of the island’s fairs with plenty of singing and dancing giving a folklore picture with its artistic quality. Zoe Stin Mitilini participated at the Moscow Film Festival. The first two films were also presented at the National Festival of Ethnographic and Sociological Cinema, in Athens, 1961. The short documentary Lesbos is totally a tourist presentation of the island itself.
One more noteworthy short documentary is Kinigimeni Pistas (Hunted Faith). The producer, director, scriptwriter, and cameraman was Antonis Triadafilidis. According to Athanasios Katsios, Antonis Triadafilidis started his documentary with very good camera work in the area of Meteora and with a surprising presentation of the artistic treasures in some monasteries presenting the peoples faith during the century of persecution with originality, and with Byzantine music as a background.

Another one was To Krifo Palati Tis Manis (The Secret Palace of Mani) directed by Despina Skalotheou and Thanasis Spiliotis.

The following short movies Yia Aftes Tis Eroedes (For Those Heroines); directed by Nikos Tzimas and Giorgos Siskas, To Savvatovratho (Saturday Night), directed by Panos Papakiriakopoulos, and Ta Matoklada Sou Lamboun (Your Eye Lashes Are Luminous), directed by Kostas Ferris. Those movies were rejected by the festival committee because of their subject with social problems. Later those three documentaries played an important part in the history of Greek Cinema in short movies.

The most important feature documentary in 1961 was the Tragodia Tou Ageou (The Aegean Tragedy), produced and directed by the cameraman Vasilis Maros. According to Aglae Metropoulou (p. 430) the arrangement for the script was written by Angelos Prokopiou (son of artist-painter and cameraman Giorgos Prokopiou). Maros received from Angelos Prokopiou his father's work of about 14 thousand meters of film. Prokopiou senior had collected this valuable material from Smyrna and the war journals of Filopoinim Finos, Joseph Hepp, Demetris Gaziadis, Gavrilis Longos, Demetris Kourbetis, Gerasimos and Yannis Drimaropoulos, Manolis Megaloekonomou and Kornilios Diakakis of the Balkan Wars, World War I, the Asian Minor War, and World War II. Vasilis Maros presented an excellent historical film based totally on factual material. After presented in the Thessaloniki film festival, Tragodia Tou Ageou (The Aegean Tragedy) was released in Athens on November 7, 1961. Vasilis Maros did an outstanding arrangement of the past historical Greek events in chronological order. Maros in this documentary covered the period starting with Balkan War (1912-1913), the war of Asia Minor, the two wars World War I, World War II, the German occupation from (1941-1944) and the Civil War of 1945 through 1949. Vasilis Maros lists all the important details of very barbaric events, particularly the way Turks treated the war prisoners by cutting the ends of their bodies, nailing horseshoes on their feet before executing them. Vasilis Maros gives also many incidents of other wars and political events during that period (from 1912 to 1945) including revolutions, exiles, dictatorship, occupation, victories and defeats. Most effectively, it touches the subject with strong messages through the whole movie of the prolonged Greek political failure to unite. Through his movie, Vasilis Maros preached the message of a united Greece, arguing strongly that it was time to end the continuous quarrels, rise above self-interest and finally achieve a united Greece. He won a “Special Prize” in the Thessaloniki film festival in 1961. He also won an “Honorary Award” in the Melbourne film festival and a “Distinguished Award” in San Francisco, Edinburgh, and Sidney film festivals. According to Aglae Metropoulou, (pp. 431-432) Vasilis Maros received more than fifteen awards and his documentary Tragodia Tou Ageou (The Aegean Tragedy) was presented in BBC., N.B.C and several other television stations around the world. It could be considered as the first historical and political documentary of the Greek cinema of its time. This is the first feature documentary by Vasilis Maros since Achilleas Madras made I Prostifges.
Tou Polemou (The Refugees of The War) in 1922, and since Demetris Gaziadis and Giorgos Prokopiou filmed the Battle of Sagarios River in 1919-1922. It is the first historical and political documentary.

For the best short documentary in 1961, the first prize went to the movie To Krifo Palati Tis Manis (The Secret Palace of Mani), produced by Despina Skalotheou, directed by Despina Skalotheou and Athanasios Spiliotios who also won another award for “Best Director of Photography.” He was also a cameraman.

The director Takis Kanelopoulos who had successfully directed the documentary Makedonikos Gamos (Macedonian Wedding) in 1960, in 1961 directed the short documentary Thasos. It was like an emotional song, colorfully depicting the characteristics of the people of the island of Thasos and is full of nostalgia, love and beauty.

The year 1962 shows the production of twenty one short documentaries and short movies with nine of those selected to be presented in the Thessaloniki film festival that took place from 17th through 23 of September, 1962. Two films one short movie and one short documentary that attracted most of the attention in the festival were Athens Chi-Psi-Ksi produced by Lia Kariotou and directed by Demetris Kollatos. His short movie was an original in strong satiric tone, but a charming work in many aspects. Its original plot was based on a young tourist girl who, after loosing her glasses, started looking at people very closely. What she saw was very different than what is seeing from the distance. Lia Kariotou and Demetris Kollatos rightly won the “First Prize” award for “Best Short Movie.”

The second one was the short documentary Ta Egenia (The Opening) produced and directed by Kostas Sfikas which represented Greece at the Festival of People in Florence in 1962. Its plot was based in the activities of a young boy as a lottery seller and gives in a very sentimental way the efforts of a small “business” boy trying to survive financially. The year 1962 shows the appearance of some new directors in short documentaries and short movies. Nikos Nikolaedis with his short movie Lacrimae Rerum presents a nostalgic, romantic and lyric presentation of Lanbros Porfikias poem in a cinematography language. Kostas Sfikas with his movie Ta Egenia mentioned above, Athonis Kirios with his movie Irene Ke Zoe (Peace And Life), Athanasios Meritzis with his movie Hora Ton Kentavron (The Land Of Centaurs), Mycenae directed by Nikos Sabatakos, and E Parastasis Teliose (The Performance Is Over) directed by Minas Christidis. The same year two short documentaries were produced by Filopoi Amos of Finos Film, Jannena and Nauplion directed by Errikos Thalassinos.

The year 1963 shows a slight decrease in the production of short documentaries and short movies. They were produced a total of nineteen movies. That year also marks the appearance of the newcomer Francis Karabot, a devoted person to this kind of movies. Since 1963 he is credited with a total of forty- one short movies and documentaries as a director and some of them as a producer too. From the nineteen movies that were produced this year, three of those their subject was for Cyprus. The director Kostas Sfikas returned that year in the Thessaloniki film festival with his short movie Anamoni (Waiting). Kostas Sfikas again with his subject the working class, touches on nostalgia and sentimentality of that period. Its title “Waiting” indicates how the construction workers wait for decades daily outside of the Athens City Hall Square for someone to hire them for a day’s work. Their agony and hope that “I may be the lucky one today and get a job” is painted in their face and their everyday drama is given in a very simple way and tone by the director.
The Critics Award went to Fotis Mesthenios for his short movie To Proto Vima (The First Step). Fotis Mesthenios was also the producer, director, and director of photography. The first “Prize Award” for short documentary went to Roviros Manthoulis and Eraklis Papadakis for their movie Pio Megali Dinamis (The Greatest Power), produced by Roviros Manthoulis, Fotis Mesthenios, and Eraklis Papadakis, while the directors and scriptwriters were Roviros Manthoulis and Eraklis Papadakis.

Also in 1963, the newcomer Demos Theos (Demosthenis Gerasis) with coworker the director Fotis Lambrinos made the first political short movie of the period 1960-1970. Its title was 100 Ores Tou Mai (100 Hours in May). Its political plot was the assassination of Greek pacifist Grigoris Lambrakis in 1963. For some writers, this short movie marks the beginning of the political Greek cinema. The movie was released in the Festival for Short Movies in Tours, France, in 1963. But for reasons not all together clear, it was not released in Greece until 1974.

The year 1964 is also notable for the increase in quantity and quality of several short documentaries and short movies, a total of thirty five. The most worthy one is the short documentary Elies (The Olives) written and directed by Demetris Kollatos, an adaptation from his own novel under the same title. Its theme is a criticism of the inhuman conditions undergone by olive picking farm workers while at the same time presenting the disadvantaged status of women in the society over the centuries. It also gives a picture of the life in the island and the customs. The Greek censors did not approve of its public release for seventeen years in Greece. The Olives was successfully presented in France with very good reviews. For instance, the French Professor of Philosophy, Garodin, in a letter addressed to Demetris Kollatos expresses his admiration for his work. He also calls him “... a poet of destiny who knows how to present with his camera the conditions under which some human beings exist and work.”

The “First Prize” award by the Critics according to Antonis Moshovakis went to the film, Kipros Ou' M' Ethespisen (Cyprus Did Not Inspire me). It is one of the three short movies which we mention for 1963 with subject the island Cyprus. Producer-director was Ninos Fenek Mikelidis. Its plot was a cinematography translation of the poems, “Salamina of Cyprus” and “Eleni” by Giorgos Seferis, the honored Nobel Prize Greek poet.

Worthy of mention, also are the short documentaries To Paramithi Enos Zografou-Theophilos (The Fairy Tale of An Artist 'Painter' Theophilos)” and To Tama (The Vow). Both were produced, written and directed by the well-known scriptwriter and film director Nestor P. Matsas. The first one it presents the life of that great self-taught folk painter of Modern Greece, Theophilos. His work and all the characters around Theophilos who are real and they lived watching him create with fantasy and colorfully the most important historical events of his country. It was presented with beautiful camera work by Vasilis Konstantinidis and the creative imagination and poetic aspects by the director Nestor Matsas. The film received an award at the festival of Rome in 1966. The second short movie To Tama (The Vow) depicted a young girl who her parents had promised her to the Virgin Mary. It is an anatomy of a human being’s faith. Though it did not participate in the Thessaloniki film Festival in 1964, it won an award at Rome's Film Festival in 1966.

An impressive presentation in the Italian Film Festival made the documentary Sto Vraho Tis Monemvasias (In the Rock of Monemvasia) produced by Elias Pergadis. Director was Tasos A. Petris and director of photography and cameraman was Takis Venetanakos. The story is narrated by the actor Christos Katsiyannis while the original titles are made by the art designer Apostolos Th. Panayopoulos.

The same year 1964 the director and cameraman Vasilis Maros participated at the Thessalonica film festival with his short documentary Kalymnos to Nisi Ton Sfougaramon (Kalymnos the Island of Sponges Men). He presents in a skilful way the hard and dangerous life of those men in this island making a living by taking a risk every time they dive for sponges. Every one of those men is full of dreams, faith, and countless courage every time they live their island for their daring work. Their work has a fortunate and rewarding, and for some an unfortunate side.

The year 1965 the quantity remains almost the same. According to the Daily News paper “Ethnos” a total of thirty two short documentaries and short movies were produced. However, according to Antonis Moshovakis, only eight short movies and one feature documentary were selected for competition. The feature documentary of this year was Greece Horis Eriopia (Greece without Ruins). It is a colorful cinematic scope for tourist advertisement about Greece, directed by Angelos Lambrou and Mikis Grammatikopoulos. They point out some present-day customs, some historical flashbacks for contrast, with good background music written by the well-known composers Mikis Theodorakis and Stavros Xarhakos.

The winner for the best short movie of 1965 was Anthropi Ke Thei (People and Gods), directed by Roviros Manthoulis and Erakis Papadakis. It is a documentary of classic theaters and temples.

In the same Film Festival of Thessalonica in 1965 three more short movies: To Alogo (The Meeting), all three received an award. To Alogo was directed by a new, talented, and self-taught director, Kostas Zoes. He based his story on the novel by Zaharias Papanoudiou and caught the mood very realistically. There is a sentimental relationship between a farmer and his horse, upon which his livelihood depends. The horse was the man’s only companion in life. The high point was when the Second World War started and the horse was taken away from him to be used in the war effort. Director Kostas Zoes treated this event very skillfully. Kostas Zoes’s short movie, besides receiving two more local awards, received an “Honorable” mention at the Film Festival of Oberhausen and Krakow in 1966. The second short movie was Gramma Apo To Serleroua (Letter from Charleroi) directed by Lambros Liaropoulos. It is well-made, realistic picture of the life and activities of the Greek community in the coal mines of Belgium and Germany. The strongest massage on his movie is the sociological problem about immigration. The picture composition of the gray, depressed skies, and the dark piles of black coal, are very effective; it is a very well-written script, and the director's message are clear, effectively presented, and understood by all.

The third short movie Sinandisis (The Meeting) is produced and directed by Mika Zaharopoulou. Its plot is a sentimental study about a bored rich girl and her reaction after a short friendship with a young villager. Mika Zaharopoulou received a second Prize award for “Best Short Movie” in the Thessalonica film Festival of 1965.

One short movie that it is funny and pleasant is O Kleftis (The Thief), eighteen minutes long. It was produced by Nikos Varveris, written and directed by Padelis Voulgaris. A comic story of a young skillful pickpocket and a sharp policeman who is watching him in action in a crowded bus picking a pocketbook from an old lady. Instead of arresting him on the spot, he follows him, and after having conversation with him lets him free, falling for the young man’s sad story. A few moments later, the policeman discovers that his wallet was missing with all his monthly salary in it. The performances by the stage actor director Alexis Damianos in the leading role were very realistic and noteworthy.

A certain short movie which was not presented in the Greek Film Festival at Thessalonika, but got very good reviews, is Perifani Ratsa (The Proud Race). It is written and directed by Giorgos Assariotakis who based his script on an anthology by the world-renowned and legendary writer Nikos Kazantzakis. The director Giorgos Assariotakis had a certain originality which became his trademark because of the way he handles his subject and characters. The good photography by cameraman Takis Georgopoulos, and the good acting by Stavros Christoforidis, as Alexis Zorbas, is notable. The next one is the short documentary Periptosis Tou Ochi (The Case of “No”). Its plot is a reminder of the bad times during the German occupation highlighting the most important events of that period. It is a work by three newcomers, Takis Avgerinos, Rena Hoeme and Lakis Papastathis.

The year 1966 shows the production of twenty six short movies and short documentaries. Only seven were selected by the committee for competition in the Thessalonika Film Festival. The Alumina Ties Elides (Aluminum of Greece) participated but without competing. From the feature documentaries of the same year the most important one was Eleftherios Venizelos. Produced in 1965 and released February 14, 1966. It was directed by Lila Kourkoulakou, and written by Evangelos Hatziyannis and M. Makrakis. It analyzes certain historical events in chronological order of the life of the great political figure, statesman, and diplomat Eleftherios Venizelos (1864-1936). The movie in some respects is like the feature documentary Tragodia Tou Ageou (Aegean Tragedy), directed by Vasilis Maros in the year 1961, but the director Lila Kourkoulakou placed greater emphasis on the personality and political activities of Eleftherios Venizelos and his great efforts for a united and expanded modern Greece.

In the category of short movies and documentaries, which participated in the film festival in 1966 only two won a prize. The first one was Tzimis O Tigris (Jimmy the Tiger) fifteen minutes long, written and directed by Pandelis Voulgaris, again who won the first Prize award for the “Best Short Movie.” The leading actor Spiros Kalogerou won an “Honorary” award for his performance. It is a short romance in the streets of Athens between a German girl, a tourist, and a circus strong man, who for a short period of time after meeting her lives in a dream world and after some episodes he is back to reality. A truly Greek subject with some Italian neorealism in it.

The second one is the short documentary Prespes. Written and directed by Takis Hatzopoulos, with good camera work by Sirkos Danalis. Angeliki Tsoukala as a producer and the director Takis Hatzopoulos both won a third Prize award for “Best Short Documentary.” The director Takis Hatzopoulos gives a realistic picture of the area of the big lake of Prespes located in the North West of Macedonia.

The short documentary Elliniki Mesimvria, Simi To Nisi Tou Nirea (Greek Noon Time, Simi The Island of Nireas), was produced by Fotinos P. Kladakis, and Elias A. Korres. Directed by Fotinos P. Kladakis who won a special award called “Simple Award.” Then was the short documentary 750,000 written and directed by Alexis Grivas who presents the hard living conditions of the Greek immigrants in the industrialized countries of Western Europe.
In the year 1967, of the twenty-eight short movies and documentaries that they were produced, eleven were selected by the Thessalonica Festival's committee for competition. As in the previous year, only two (one short movie, and one short documentary) won a prize. The first one was Horis Apokrasi, (Without a Reply); producer, director, scriptwriter was Ermiis (Ermolaos) Velopoulos who won the first Prize for the “Best Short Movie.” Its theme was the reaction and agony of people facing death. Their emotions and feelings gives the idea that they are influenced from their past. The first Prize for the “Best Short Documentary” went to the producer, director Apostolos Krianos for his documentary Anemi (The Winds). It is a realistic presentation of the traditions in the islands of North Aegean Sea focusing on the young men leaving their homes to find work in the merchant ships of the world.

The great Christoforos Nezer, a stage and cinema actor won a special “Honorary Award” for his leading performance in the short movie Oso Kratae Mia Floga (As Long a Flame Lasts) produced, written and directed by Nestor P. Matsas. Its plot is the life of Chrisoforos Nezer on stage with his performance in classical work and in cinema. It is also a presentation of ancient theaters and psychological anatomy of an actor. Two more short movies were produced, written and directed by Nestor P. Matsas but were not participating in the domestic festival of 1967. These are Kravgi Tis Petras (The Stone's Cry). He depicted with a unique and artistic way the life and work of the great sculptor of his time Yannoulis Halepas. Matsas won three awards for his movie Kravgi Tis Petras (The Stone's Cry). One in the Rome film festival and one in Vermeil of Academy of Arts and Letters of Paris both in 1968. The next year 1969 participate in the Thessalonica film festival and won an “Honorary” award. Nestor P. Matsas other movie was Ena Komati Ouranos (A Piece of the Sky). Its plot is a very sentimental subject about the life of a young blind girl who could see only through the eyes of her soul. The year 1968 it participates in the Festivals of Cannes and Teheran.

In 1967 the director Vasilis Maros came up with his version of the movie Anastenaria (Fire Walkers) that a few years earlier in 1960 Roussos Koundouros had made the first one based on the same subject. And if that was not enough, a newcomer the director Sotiris Sotiriadis made his version of Anastenaria, following later by the director, writer Nestor P. Matsas with his version of Anastenaria. It seems to us that all of them tried to keep that ethnological tradition and custom alive.

One should note that in Athens 1967, the Institute of Science Art and Letters of Paris honored with awards the stage and cinema actor Christoforos Nezer; the stage and cinema actress Miranda Myrat; the director, scriptwriter Nestor P. Matsas; and piano soloist Maria Herogiorgou-Sigar.

According to Kostas A. Linardatos, thirty-five short movies and documentaries participated in Thessalonica film Festival in 1968. Unfortunately he does not list all thirty five of them but only nine that were selected by the Festival's committee for competition. Out of the nine short movies and short documentaries again this year only two won an award. The winner for “Best Short Documentary” was 25,000 Hronia S' Aftin Tin Ye (25,000 Years in This Land). Produced, written and directed by Nestor P. Matsas. Director of photography and cameraman was Giorgos Antonakis. Narrator was the actor Demetris Myrat, and the music was written by Christos Mourabas. The importance of this work by Nestor Matsas is the description of the life and customs of ancient Greek nomads called “Sarakatsanos” who roam mostly in Epirus, Macedonia, and Thrace. Ethnographers believe that they have lived in these areas for twenty-five thousand years up to our time. The above documentary won the “First Prize” award also in Rome's film festival. It participates in the “International Anthropological Convention” in Tokyo. Also participates in Barcelona and San Francisco film festivals the same year 1968. The above documentary has been translated in twenty different languages.

The winner for the “Best Short Movie” was O Drapetis (The Fugitive). Produced by Malte Film. Written and directed by Kostas Zoes. The director of photography and cameraman was Christos Mangos. The performance in the leading role by the young boy Panos Zoes (son of Kostas Zoes), was very noticeable. The same year 1968 a new director Giorgos Belesiotos made his debut with a short movie Betonitis Ke Varitini (Cement Mixer and Gravity), seventeen minutes long. Since then he has been credited with a total of twenty short movies.

The “Critics Union Cinema of Athens” award in 1968 for the “Best Short Movie” went to Ekpobi (Broadcast), written and directed by Theodoros Angelopoulos, while the director of photography and cameraman was Giorgos Arvanitis. The point that Angelopoulos wanted to make was not the Broadcast itself but the routine advertisement found in every country. His group searched the streets of a typical big city to find the perfect person, if that is possible. If that person is found, then award him or her with the benefit of spending a certain time (or a day) with a well known movie star. In the movie, Ekpobi (Broadcast) there is the fast tempo in narration which is current in modern broadcasting. There is a popular critic who is the hero of the movie. It centers on his miserable life in a dream sequence, which contrasts his inner self with his public image. The following film makers participated in making this movie: Pandelis Voulgaris, Tania Marketaki, Kostas Ferris, Nikos Panayiotopoulos and the well known cameraman Giorgos Arvanitis.

The award for “Best Short Documentary” went to Thiraekos Orthos, (A Dawn in Thera). The producers were Stavros Tornes, and Giorgos Samiotis. The directors and scriptwriters were Stavros Tornes and Kostas Sfikas. In the movie Thiraekos Orthos (A Dawn in Thera) the picture composition presents such harmony and beauty of life of the islands, specifically in Santorini, how the industry of tourism has taken over but also the economic exploitation; whitewashed houses contrast with ever present poverty. The director of photography, Giorgos Panousopoulos had accomplished a very good picture composition presenting the ugly and hard life of the people in that island and the natural beauty of the island itself. Both of the above short movies critically depicted each in its own way, the life of a contemporary Greek area. One was in the capital and the other in an island. Both movies strongly present the concealing masks which people wear to cover reality.

The same year, director Vasilis Maros produced a short documentary Zoe Tou Heinrich Schliemann (The Life of Heinrich Schliemann). H. Schliemann (1822-1890), a German archeologist born in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, founded of the new branch of archeological science and laid the foundation of modern knowledge of the Mycenaean civilization. Much of his work was published in German and English, such as “Ithaca, der Peloponnesus, und Troja” 1869; “Troy and Its Remains “(1875); “Mycenae” (1877); “Illos, “Orchomenos” both in 1881; “Troja” (1883); and “Tiryns” (1885). In 1850 while he was living in California, just when the state joined the Union, H. Schliemann became an American citizen. In 1847 he had established a successful business in St. Petersburg, Russia, that made him wealthy. With the moral support of his Greek wife and his boyhood dream and love for the Homeric legend, he learned ancient and modern Greek languages. After he retired in 1863 with a large fortune he visited in 1868 the Greek islands Corfu, Ithaca, the Peloponnesus, and Asia Minor. In 1870 he began excavations in Troy on the hill of Hissarlik, believing strongly that the city of ancient Troy would be discovered. He confirmed the Homeric legend by discovering many ancient treasures. Schliemann from 1876 to 1878 excavated successfully Ithaca, Mycenae, and Orchomenus. In 1884-85 he started excavation at the ruins of palace at Tiryns (Tureens) 11

Also in 1968, Takis Avgerinos and Lakis Papastathis (this time without Rena Hoeme) came out with the short movie Odos Ermou 28 (28 Ermou Street). Director of Photography was Christos Magkos. Their plot is based in the novel “Dikeosis” (Justification) by Spiros Plaskovitis.

One should also note that in 1968 the director of photography and cameraman Christos Magkos won an award for “Best Cinematography” for his work in four short movies. O Drapetis (The Fugitive) directed by Kostas Zoes. that we mentioned above, Anef Oron (Unconditional); directed by Nikos Nikolaedis, To Depnon (Supper); directed by Fotis Lazaridis, and the short documentary Odos Ermou 28 (28th Ermou Street); directed by Demetris (Takis) Avgerinos and Lakis Papastathis.

Out of the twenty-five short movies and documentaries that were produced in 1969, the committee in the Thessalonica film festival selected only six for competition. The winner for the “Best Short Movie” was the director Theodoros Maragkos with his movie Tsouf, based on a very short assay for the world’s problems in general. One should note that it is the third short animation movie since 1945.

The Director Takis Kanelopoulos who had won an award for the “Best Short Documentary” Makedonikos Gamos (Macedonian Wedding) in 1960, he won again for the “Best Short Documentary” Kastoria. For the “Best Short Movie” by a “New Director” the winner was Stavros Hasapis with his movie Labyrinth with subject the life in the big cities and focuses on the why some people feel lonely and bored.

The Critics award (by the representatives of Athenian and Macedonian Press) in 1969 went for the “Best Short Movie” again to director Theodoros Maragkos for his movie Tsouf. The “Honorary” distinction award was given to the short movies Media 70 directed by Michalis Papanikolaou and to the short documentary Kravgi Tis Petras (The Stone’s Cry) written and directed by Nestor Matsas which we have mention about this short movie in 1967. The director Giorgos Maris won the Critics award for “Best New Director” for his short movie Partita. Worthy of note is also the short documentary Giorti Den Telioni Pote (The Celebration Never Ends). It is written, produced, and directed by Nestor P. Matsas. Its plot about the special ways of celebrating the Greek Easter in many small cities and villages. The customs and folkloric celebrations are presented very colorfully along with the spring festivals in the natural beauty of Greece. The above documentary received in 1970 the “First Prize” award in Marseilles film festival.

In 1970 a total of thirty-seven short movies and documentaries were produced. Strangely enough this year sixteen short movies and documentaries participated in Thessaloniki’s film festival for competition and two participated without competition. The winner for the “Best Short Documentary” was the producer, director and scriptwriter Giorgos Latinis with his documentary Epikinonia (Communication). The director Giorgos Latinis depicts the life and behavior of a deaf child, a very sentimental subject handled very skillfully. The winner for a “Short Movie with Theme” was the director and scriptwriter Kostas Papadopoulos for the movie Arhodisa Ke O Cowboy (The Noble Lady and the Cowboy). The award for the Best New “Meetin Matsas” was divided between directors Niki Triadafilidi for her movie To Sinithismeno mou Onero (My Usual Dream) she is also the scriptwriter, and to the director Kostas Natsos for his short movie Ta Egenia (The Opening). For movie with a theme, the award for “Best New Director” in documentary went to producer-director Nikos Grammatikopoulos for his documentary To Sinaxari Tou Xilou (The Wooden Prayer Book).

The Critics awards “First Prize” was given to the short movie Arhodisa Ke O Cowboy (The Nobel Lady and the Cowboy). The “Second Prize” was given to the short movie Epikinonia (Communication). And the “Third Prize” was given to a short movie 40, 38-22, 57 directed by Tassos Psarras.

Out of the four short movies that were produced, written and directed by Nestor Matsas in 1970 three participated in the Thessaloniki film festival, two of them without competition. The first one was the short documentary Macedonia. It is a colorful historical and national folklore documentary for Macedonia, the country of Alexander the Great who was born in Pella, the ancient capital of Macedonia. Alexander was the son of King Philip II of Macedonia and Olympia a princess of Epirus. The second one was I Alli Siopi (The Other Silence). Its plot is a cinema essay depicting the variations of eloquent silence. The leading actor was Christoforos Nezer. The third one was Riza Tou Tra-goudiou (The Root of a Song); though it participated in the Thessalonica film festival with out competition received an “Honorary” award in 1970. Its subject is a cinematic research over the country for the roots of folk songs, from the antiquity to our time. The fourth noteworthy short movie by Nestor Matsas was Megali Sinadisi (The Great Meeting); It depicts the traveling of Apostle Paul in Greece and the meeting of the Greek spirit with Christianity. It was not participating in the Thessalonica film festival.

One important short documentary with a strong massage was To Teleftee Fili (The Last Kiss), produced and directed by Giorgos Filis. Its theme is the fight for freedom in his native island Cyprus, a fight that is probably lost from the start. However, the Cypriots continue to persevere in fighting for freedom and justice.

Although animation is not too common in the Greek film industry, one more animation movie was made. It is the short movie Ta Mallia (The Hair), directed by Christian Sourlos who presents with humor a person's reaction whenever the thought of war entered his mind. When that happened, his hair stood straight up.

Also in 1970, in Los Angeles California, two short movies were produced, written and directed by Trifon P. Tzavalas. The first one was The Dreamer based on a true story of two brothers from Mexico in 1915. One lived in Los Angeles and the other in Mexico. After receiving a letter from his brother telling him how good he had made it in the United States, the young man in Mexico decided to go and stay with his brother in Los Angeles. Unfortunately, by not having any means of transportation, he left Mexico on foot and was later found dead in the desert area between Mexico and Los Angeles. The second short movie Image Exchange based on events of every day life in Los Angeles. It is a story of a poor couple that unfortunately only the man works and their income is limited so they could not afford any other kind of entertainment except whatever television had to offer. The wife checked the TV GUIDE very thoroughly every day for their nightly entertainment. By watching so much television, and for such a long time, and by getting very involved in the TV programs that they watched, they started seeing themselves on the screen instead of the leading characters.

In 1970 the magazine Contemporary Cinema established the first Pan Greek festival for short movies, a total of three altogether. The next year 1971, Contemporary Cinema financed the production of ten short movies. In that group were some new film makers that disagreed with the commercial film industry and with the political situation of the junta which was in power from 1967 through 1974. According to Alida Demetriou (p. 15) during that seven-year period, though the quantity increased, the quality decreased.

The year 1971 seems to belong to the producer-scriptwriter-director Nestor P. Matsas again. Out of the thirty-four short movies and documentaries that were produced that year, seven were produced, written, and directed by Nestor P. Matsas. Out of the nine short movies and short documentaries that were selected by the Thessaloniki film festival committee for competition; two were made by Nestor P. Matsas. His movies were Mesa Apo Tin Enotittita: Kriti (From the Eternity: Crete). It is a cinema journey of the History, Civilization, Art and the contemporary life in Crete. The second one was Anthropini Gefira (The Human Bridge). It depicts the miracle of humanity by people working together in one small mountainous village. The third one is Megali Ekogenia (A Great Family); its plot presents a children’s life in a camp and the spiritual attitude of working, creating, and thinking together, in an atmosphere of love surrounding young children. The fourth one was To Magiko Dendro (The Magic Tree); it depicts the cultivation of gum trees and in the process traveling throughout the island Chios of yesterday and today. The fifth one was I Megali Ora (A Great Time); through skillful editing, Matsas depicts the preparations for the revolution against the Ottomans, emphasizing the most important moments and persons involved in the fight for freedom. His sixth short movie was Omorfia Tou Thanatou (The Beauty of Death). His last one was To Prosope (The Face) which received an “Honorary” award due to lack of competition. The folklore short documentary To Prosope (The Face) is based in the traditional mask (made of wax) that the dancers wear during a carnival (in Boules) celebration in the city of Nausea. The celebration is a participation of all people in the city with many Dionysian elements. Director Nestor P. Matsas presents the continuity of customs, going back to their primitive roots. It is the thirtieth documentary by the director Nestor P. Matsas belonging to the series Rizes Tou Topou mas (The Roots of Our Land).

The same year 1971 a newcomer, the director Kostas Aristopoulos, made the short documentary Draki (The Dragons) targeting the political conditions of that period by making direct and indirect references to the dictatorship. However, his biases were very evident.

The winner for the first Prize award in 1971 Thessalonikis film festival was the short movie Ssst! directed by Theodoros Maragos. It was his second short movie using the animation system. This time the director presented the contrast between the advertising world in newspapers and promises by the politicians. To present the theme, he used a poor family living the reality of life. The director Vasilis Maros won the “First Prize” for his short documentary O Kosmos Ton Ikonon (The World of Images). In this short movie he was successful presenting the richness and beautiful work of Byzantine Art in Mount Sinai, Jerusalem, Mount Athos, and in other Balkan countries as well as Russia. The director Iordanis Ananiadis received the first prize for short movie by a “New Director” for his movie Pandesia (Banquet-Feast) which humorously described the march of Dionysus to Mount Olympus.

A total of thirty-five movies were produced in 1972. Out of those, only sixteen plus one without competition participated in the Thessalonica film festival. The winners for the first prize of short documentaries were Mani, directed by Ermis Vellopoulos, and Kastoria directed by Takis Kanelopoulos. The director Ermis Vellopoulos, in his documentary Mani, describes the well known but unusual area of Mani with its poor and difficult terrain and people struggling to service, their customs, and morals.

The evidence indicates that Takis Kanelopoulos had won the first prize for his short documentary Kastoria in the Thessalonica film festival in 1969. One should ask how it is possible the same documentary (according to Kosmas D. Linardatos and Babis Aktsoglou) to receive the first prize in 1969, and three years later to receive the same prize for the same movie. The only possibility is that it is a continuation and a different version of his first documentary under the same title Kastoria.

The winner of a short movie with a theme was Gramma Apo Tin Ameriki (A Letter From America) directed by Lakis Papastathis. Once again the subject was the bitter immigration to America of Greeks (with their dreams, hopes, and disappointments) in the beginning of the 20th century. It used good editing to show a collection of letters, post cards and pictures that giving authenticity and clarity to the massage and obviating the need for dialog. As we will see later, the subject of immigration and its effects, particularly in rural areas, was used again by several short movies and documentaries in subsequent years. The winner for best short movie by a “New Director” was Theodoros Kalomeras with his movie Yia Liges Mono Parasitasis (For A Few Performers Only). The winner for best short documentary by a “New Director” was Mimis Kougioumtzis with his documentary Chroniko: Silloges Apo To Theatron Technis (Chronicle: Collections from The Theater of Art).

According to Babis Aktsoglou, and Alida Demetrioiu the year 1973, to everyone’s surprise, had a big boom in production of short movies and short documentaries. A total of sixty-one short and one feature documentary were produced. The most important one was the feature documentary Enas Eros Me to Mnimoskopio (A Hero with Memory scope); produced by Elias Pervades and Giorgos Filis, with the last one being also the scriptwriter and the director. It presents the activities of Grigoris Afxedios in the war to free Cyprus in the mid-1950’s using documents from the British archives. It is a cry out by the Cypriot people demanding that the great powers to do what they preach and help them to establish justice and stop the violation of human rights. This documentary received two awards in the Thessaloniki film festival; one for the best production and one for the best music award. For the short movies and short documentaries, the winners that year were the short documentary Adiexodos (Impasse) directed by Nikos Papathanasiou who received the first prize award. The first prize for a short movie with a theme was given to the movie Grammi (The Line), written and directed by Yannis Koutsouris and Nasos Mirmiridis. It was an original plot based on fingerprints, lines and symbols combined. Strangely enough, though it was presented in several international festivals (such as Montreal, New York, Monte Carlo, Vienna, to mention only a few) and received several awards, no movie theater in Greece released it. For unknown reasons, distributors and theater owners rejected the first grade Greek short movies and short documentaries preferring second or third rated foreign works. In fact, as we mentioned earlier, there was a law since 1961 requiring the projection of short movies monthly, but that law was never enforced.

The award for best short movie by a “New Director” was received by Nikos Kouvelidakis for his movie Teleftea Prova (The Last Rehearsal); and the director Marinos Kassios won for his short documentary Pissistratos Gouras the award for the best short documentary by a “New Director.” Then it was the short documentary The Bouzouki (A Musical Instrument) produced and directed by Vasilis Maros, who was also the director of photography. The cameramen were Giorgos Antonakis and Andreas Ahladis. Though it was not selected by the committee of Thessalonica film festival because of censorship, it participated in Soviet Greek friendship festival in Moscow in 1973 and received an award. Its plot chronicles the history of the Greek folk song and its evolution for the previous fifty years. The director Vasilis Maros in most of his movies had as co-workers Christos Triadafillou as assistant director, cameramen Giorgos Antonakis and Andreas Ahladis and Stavros Abatzoglou for sound recording.

Because of censorship during the previous years, many short documentaries short and feature movies were rejected for presentation by Thessalonica film festival committee. The following short documentaries and short movies were at first rejected because of their themes, but later were accepted for competition. These are Ipoprapste Parakalo (Sing Please), directed by Lambros Papadimitrikas; Telefse Prova (The Last Rehearsal), directed by Nikos Koutelidakis, and the short documentary The Bouzouki which we mentioned above. Strangely enough, both of the above short movies and short documentary received the first prize when they were permitted for participation with competition 1974 after the fall of the dictatorship.

The director Apostolos Krionas with his short documentary Itan Mia Mera Giortis (It Was a Day of Celebration) presents again the subject of immigration and its effect in a small Macedonian village which was deserted. The director Tassos Psarras with his short documentary To Thavma (The Miracle) and the director Nikos Koutelidakis with his short movie Telefse Prova (The Last Rehearsal), all three received the Critics award for the best short movies and best short documentary. Aliki Alexandraki received the Best Actress award by the Critics for her performance in the short movie Katathesi (Deposition); directed by Christos Poliyannopoulos. The actor Stratos Pahis received the Best Supporting Actor award for his performance in the short movie Ta Plouti Tou Mida (The Fortune of Midas), directed by Panos Papadopoulos. One should note that all the above Critics awards were funded by the producer James Paris (Demetris Parashakis). One short movie that is a combination of sketches with live characters was Anthropos Ke Eftihia (Person and Happiness), produced and directed by Theodoros Vamvourelis. He gives a picture of different persons and the way every human being thinks, feels, and searches for happiness. One more historical feature documentary of 1973 was Dionisos Solomos, directed by Lila Kourkoulakou. She presents the activities and work of the national poet of the Greeks, Dionisos Solomos, in modern Greece who wrote the National Hymn.

The year 1974 started with some serious problems, at least in the committee of the Thessalonica film festival. With the fall of the Junta in the summer of 1974, the producers demanded the resignation of certain members of the festival committee, claiming they belonged to the Junta. They also demanded the abolition of censorship and permission for participation for competition in the festival of all short documentaries and short movies (like the feature movies) that had been rejected by censors since the junta took over (April 21, 1967). They also demanded the abolition of governmental trustees. However, the evidence indicates that out of the sixty-four short movies and documentaries that were produced, 24 of them participated in the Thessalonica film festival, 11 for competition and 13 without competition.

When the dissatisfied producers and directors formed the “Anti-Festival” in 1974 and presented their feature movies in the movie theater “Fraganis”. In the same movie...
In the Thessaloniki film festival in 1974, the committee selected two feature documentaries Megara and Gazoros Serron. The feature documentary Megara, was written, produced, and directed by Giorgos Tseberopoulos and Sakis Maniatis, the last one was also the director of photography and cameraman. This film attracted a lot of attention mostly because of its political theme. Its theme described the protest by the people of Megara against the decision of the “junta” to locate an oil refinery in Pahis, near Megara, about thirty miles from Athens. The camera shows the desperate efforts by the people of Megara (population of about thousand) to repeal the dictatorial decree and at any cost keep away from their city the authorities and their bulldozers. There were issues such as environmental pollution, the change of their quality of life, and most important their freedom. At first, the inhabitants were evicted by force. All cultivated areas, including old olive trees, were uprooted. It is the first time a group of people went against the junta and won. The movie ends with the brutal suppression of the student uprising at the Polytechnic School of Athens. This film was shown, besides in the Thessaloniki film festival, in seven European film festivals, winning two international awards.

The second feature documentary Gazoros Serron it was produced by “Cinematic” with Apostolos Papaefstathiou as producer. It was written and directed by Takis Hatzopoulos, while the director of photography and cameraman was Evangelos Eliopoulos. Its plot depicts the life, customs and traditions of the city Gazoros, near Serres. It presents a picture of a typical Greek village, rural life, and problems resulting from domestic immigration. The emphasis is on the conditions created by the lack of young people who had left for a “better” life elsewhere. The main reason for immigration was the bad economy in the countryside and the dreams and hopes of the immigrants seeking something better from what they already had.14

The awards for the short documentaries and short movies in 1974 were as follows: First prize for “Best Short Documentary” the winner was Ellines Laiki Zografi (Greek Folklore Painters) written and directed by Giorgos Dizikirikis. The first prize for short movie with theme the winner was the director Athanasios Netas for his short movie Afigisis Tis Antigones (Antigone’s Narration) written by Alexandra Angistriotou. It depicts the adventure of a Greek (Greek) woman who comes to Greece from Russia and who brought with her a photo album containing her memories and a tape recording which contained narration by the director’s grandmother. The director Nikos Alevaras received the first prize award for best short movie with theme by a “New Director” with his short movie O Pappous Mou (My Grandfather). That year, the Critics awards were replaced by the “Public Awards.” The feature documentary Megara received the Public award for the “Best Picture” while the short documentary Ellines Laiki Zografi (Greek Folklore Painters) received the award for the “Best Documentary.” That year, for the first time in the Festival’s history, a “Public Award” for the worst movie was also handed out. The winner of this award for the worse short movie was to Nikitas Siselis for his short movie Mi.

The year 1974 marks the production of several feature documentaries with political subjects. Before 1974, there were some short documentaries which lightly touched on political subjects. After the fall of the Junta in 1974, some liberal directors took the opportunity to express their point of view and their political condemnation of dictatorships.

The year 1975 saw the production of seventy-three short documentaries and short movies. In addition, the number of feature documentaries produced that year increased to eight, with six of them participating in Thessaloniki film festival. The feature documentaries selected by the festival's committee were, O Neos Parthenonas (The New Parthenon); produced by Giorgos Papalios and the group of four: Kostenas Chronopoulos, Giorgos Chrisovitsanos, Spiros Zahos, and Thanasis Kroubelos. The directors were Kostenas Chronopoulos and Giorgos Chrisovitsanos. The scriptwriter was Spiros Zahos, the director of photography and cameraman was Thanasis Kroubelos, while the music was written by composer Loukanios Kilaidonis. The theme of their movie was based on the period during the dictatorship of Yannis Metaxas in the decade of 30's and 40's. It included testimonies of ex-political prisoners after the Civil War ended (1946-1949) and the life in the concentration camps of Macronisos and Giaros. The movie is presenting the leftist point of view as a victim. Since it does not show all the facts and events in details from both sides left and write wings of their political spectrum that way the viewer can decide on his own what went wrong and what was right.

The second feature documentary with a political theme again was O Agonas (The Strife); Producers, directors, scriptwriters, directors of photography, and editors were the group of six: Demetris Yannikopoulos, Elias Zaferopoulos, Giorgos Thanasoulos, Theodoros Maragkos, Fevos Ekonomidis and Kostas Papanikolaou, while the music was written by Fivos Ekonomidis. Their theme was the struggle against junta during the last two years before its fall in July 1974 when the Prime Minister Konstantinos Karamanlis took over. Though the whole movie was made up of several pieces filmed separately, with everyone of those six people every one filming on his own way some political events during the Junta period, a good editing mostly by Theodoros Maragkos made a movie with good continuity.

The third one was Mani with Sakis Maniatis as producer, director, scriptwriter, director of photography, and editor. It is a different documentary from the one that a few years earlier in 1972 Ermis Velopoulos had made a short documentary for the area of Mani under the same title. This time the director Sakis Maniatis goes deeper with his personal analysis of the political and social problems in Mani by skillfully uncovering the facts and the truth of the economical and political problems of the area.

The next feature documentary was O Karaghiozis (The Main Character of Greek Shadow Theater); with newcomer Lena (Eleni) Voudouri as a director and scriptwriter. She presented the historical development of this entertainment form from 1821 to 1975. The emphasis was on the development of the main characters involved, especially “Karaghiozis” who became the means through which the different aspects of Greek society (with the notable exception of the Church) came to be satirized and often ridiculed.

One more feature documentary with political theme was Martiries (Testimonies), produced by Nikos Kavoukidis and Kostas Pitsios. The director, scriptwriter, and director of photography were Nikos Kavoukidis.
Its plot starts with the first anniversary of suppression of the student uprising at the Polytechnic School of Athens, depicting the political events leading up to the uprising and the aftermath of the rebellion. That way the viewer can have as much as possible a general and clear picture of the social and political life of that period.

The last one of the feature documentaries was Polemonda produced by Demetris Pondikas. Director and scriptwriter was Demetris Mavrikios, the director of photography and cameraman was Eltherios Pavlopoulos, while the music was written by composer Eleni Karaindrou. According to Aglae Metropoulou (p. 445), director Demetris Mavrikos gives a clear study of the social conditions of the Greek minority in South Italy, Magna Grecian, and its Greek (Greek) farmers who tried at any cost to keep their spirit, language and civilization. The farmers suffered the same way in Italy as they suffered in the Balkans.

Three feature documentaries were produced in 1974 and released in 1975: Rizes Tou Topounas (The Roots of Our Land), released Jan. 27th, 1975. It is an attempt by its writer and director Nestor Matsas to depict his personal fight and agony to preserve the folklore history- whatever is left of it. He genuinely expresses his feelings about his country, and the struggle against the intrusion of modernity which deprives the nation of its beauty, customs, and traditions. He states that “This film is the result of ten years of research, study and exploration in all parts of Greece, even to the most remote villages. Many of the subjects that he depicts no longer exist, or have undergone fundamental changes. What entire centuries could not affect has been radically altered by new ways of life and the inexorable demands of our times. All the elements of this film: picture, sound, and music are authentic in origin and locale. This documentary was dedicated to the persistent men and women who have studied Greek folk culture and who struggled for years under difficult conditions to uncover the true face of our land.”

The second feature documentary is Attila 1974, directed by Michalis Kakoyannis. With this movie the successful director, with movies to his credit such as Stella, Zorba The Greek, the classic Greek tragedies Electra and Iphigenia, this time his theme was a modern Greek tragedy about Cyprus and its rape. Being a native of Cyprus, the pain was personal. Kevin Thomas of the Los Angeles Times states that “… this extraordinary and devastatingly powerful film represents the documentary at its finest.” Arthur Knight of The Hollywood Reporter states that “… Attila’ 74 is a moving, impassioned, involved documentary.” While Stephen Farber of New West Magazine states that: Attila 74 is a film that demands to be seen, it illuminates the tragedy of a divided land.” The code ‘Attila Operation’ by the Turkish military invaders of the island Cyprus is very appropriate because it was named after the ruthless Hun leader Attila (406-453 A.D) who laid destruction over the lands he conquered before he was stopped by the Roman armies. By the code name “Attila,” the Turkish military wanted to be descriptive of their brutality. Strangely enough, Turkish leaders labeled the operation against Cyprus “Attila Peace Operation,” or “Attila Peace Invasion.” While in the mean time, two thousand eight hundred Cypriots were butchered in cold blood and many are missing. In addition, thousands of Cypriots are refugees in their own land after their houses and properties as a result of the “Attila Peace Operation” The American movie Midnight Express (1978) is another example of how the Turkish authorities treat even their own people. It seems that the word “human rights” does not exist in the Turkish vocabulary. The director Michalis Kakoyannis presents the facts with his camera showing the horror and crushing of helpless people defending themselves against the ruthless invaders who slaughter them. Kakoyannis tried publicize the injustice heaped on his native island. However, the movie was generally ignored by the media. The strong punch lines, if they were more carefully selected the movie would have more impact and stronger influence.

The next feature documentary, Etsi Prodothike E Kipros” (This Is the Way Cyprus Was Betrayed), released on May 12, 1975, was based also on the subject of the 1974 Cyprus rape, as its title indicates. Director and scriptwriter, was Giorgos Filis. Director of photography cameraman was Kostas Natsos; editor was Evangelos Yousias, while the music was written by the composer Vasilis Tenidis. Like Michalis Kakoyannis, in Attila 74, director Giorgos Filis gives a clear picture of the political machinery and how the island Cyprus was victimized by the invaders while the world watched helplessly. The message by directors Giorgos Filis and Michalis Kakoyannis are that the outrage that began in 1974 and continues to this day will never be forgotten.

One feature documentary that did not participate in any domestic festival was Ta Tragoudia Tis Fotias (The Songs of Fire) produced by Filopoinim Finos and Nikos Koundoros. Like in all of his work, Nikos Koundouros shows originality. Here he is using as his main subject the world-wide musical changes and people’s reactions in concerts. The atmosphere changes totally and very effectively of his main subject with the presentation of the funeral of Cypriot Doros Loizos who was assassinated. Narrator was Christos Reklitis, himself a victim of the dictatorship. Director Nikos Koundouros also treated the rape of Cyprus, just as Michalis Kakoyannis and Giorgos Filis did. Koundouros used mostly songs and music. The songs were executed by the well-known actress and singer Melina Merkouri, the singer Giorgos Dalaras, Antonis Kaloyannis, Maria Fardouri, Nikos Xilouris, Maria Koh, Babis (Haralambos) Garganourakis, Lakis Halkias, Lizetta Nikolau, Aliberti, and Smokovitis. All of these performers are well established singers in Greece. The music was written by the well-known composers Mikis Theodorakis and Stavros Xarhakos. That was the first work of director Nikos Koundouros after seven years of self-exile.

Out of the forty-three short documentaries and short movies that participated in the Thessaloniki film festival in 1975, the committee selected only seventeen for competition and four under the program of “Cinema Dedicated to Cyprus.” One feature documentary and three short movies were in this group. One was the feature documentary Chroniko Tis Kipriakis Simforas (Chronicle of the Cyprus Tragedy) produced and directed by Pavlos Pavlou, and the three short documentaries Kipros 1974- Meta Matia Ton Pedion (Cyprus 1974-Through Children’s Eyes) produced and directed by Yannis Karaolis. The next one was Itan Ena Nisi (It Was One Island) produced and directed by Andreas Kostantinidis. The last one was Ta Pedia Tou Perea (The Children of Piraeus) produced and directed by Kiros Rossidis. All the above productions were based on the subject of the Cyprus tragedy.

Then it was the short movie Simptosis Mias Diadromis (Coincidence of a Running Through) directed by Takis Davlopoulos and received the first prize award. It presents an allegory of a moving trolley bus going through a long historical ride. The trolley is driven by the country’s leader while the passengers debate their political subservience to foreign protectors. The director handles his politically sensitive subject with skill. The second prize went to the short documentary Telefesos Stathmos Kreuntzberg (The Last Station Kreuntzberg), produced and directed by Giorgos Karipidis. The director Kostas Natsos received the third award for his short movie O Tavros Ke to Agalma (The Bull and the Statue), while the director Panos Kokkinopoulos received the fourth prize for his short movie Pistoma (Credit). The directors Sakis Maniatis and Akis Psailas both received an “Honorary” awards the first one for his documentary Mani and the second for his short movie Termites. Two of the four Cypriot productions received special awards although they participated without competition. They were Chroniko Tis Kipriakis Simforas (Chronicle of Cyprus Tragedy) and Kipros 1974- Meta Matia Ton Pedion (Cyprus 1974-Through Children's Eyes). Then it was a humorist short movie but with strong messages Taverna (The Tavern) directed by Takis Papayiannidis. He presented the contrast of two taverns in two different time periods, one during the 50's and the other during the 70’s.

A new comer in 1975 was the director Menelaos Meletzis. He came out with his short documentary Gromeri (Gromeri Village), presenting the customs of celebrating the second day of Easter in the Village Gromeri.

Since 1960 to 1975 even with all the good production of short movies, for them to find a movie theater for release the problem remains the same, the doors were closed. Unfortunately, movie theaters did not support adequately new filmmakers of short movies or short documentaries. In 1961 was a provision made for the movie theaters to release at list four short Greek movies a month, but that it was rarely enforced. Strangle enough particular the first run movie theaters they were releasing foreign short movies even a second grade instead to release a first grade short Greek one. With these types of conditions the only hope for the short movies was the festivals, domestic and international ones, private cinema clubs, and television. But those places could not cover even the production expenses. Despite these problems, the number of short movies and documentaries increased every year.

One should note that documentaries, short or feature, and short movies in Greece through the fifteen year of 1960-1975 were developed and produced by efforts of individuals, a few institutions with very little governmental support. It was a successful development in this kind of movies, despite the interruption by the dictatorship (1967-1974). During that period most of their subjects were ethnographic and the censorship very strict. After 1974 when the dictator ship was over, feature and short documentaries were produced with any kind of subject’s political, social, criticism, educational and satirical ones. Some of the short or feature documentaries with a political subject they were not politically impartial. They presented only their point of view instead of giving the facts to the audiences and let them be the judge. There were also a few animated movies made.
The period of 1976 to 2000 was very productive in short movies and documentaries. Among the new comers was Maria Hatzimichali-Papaliou. She was involved not only as a producer but also as a director. Her feature documentary O Agonas ton Tiflon (The Struggle of the Blind), 1977, received the second prize in the Thessaloniki Film Festival, and also received the Fipresci Award. Its subject is the cry for compassion, respect, better treatment by society and especially by the church, and a sincere effort to improve the lives of the blind. Maria Papaliou is also credited with short documentaries such as Kinimatografisi Laekon Kinitopieseon (Film Archive of Greek Social and Political Life), (1979), Ginekia Portreta (Portraits of Women), (1984), the 30 minutes movies, Lily Iakovvidou (1985), O Allos Mithos (The Other Myth), (1986); Lucia (1988), a series of six 45 minute documentaries. In 1992-93 directed eight episodes, 10 to 20 minutes each under the title Macedonia, produced by the National Bank of Greece Tourism Organization. Most of her movies have participated in international film festivals. In 1991 she was awarded the Greek Academy Award for her documentary Lucia.

Also in 1976, the experimental documentary Gramma Ston Nazim Hickmet (Letter to Nazim Hickmet) was released, directed by Kostas Aristopoulos. It is an exchange of letters between the Turkish poet Nazim and the director Kostas Aristopoulos. It also includes letters exchanged with people from Chile, Spain, Turkey and Rhodesia about their serious human rights violations and their struggle for freedom and democracy and also includes pictures and folk music from each country.

These were followed by the feature documentary To Mega Dokoumendo (The Great Document), directed by Giorgos Filis. Its theme is the problem of Cyprus, the unfair invasion and the rape of the island by the Turkish Army. It also presents the problem of Turkish and Greek (Greek) Cypriots who became refugees in their own country and the 1619 Greek Cypriots missing due to the 1974 invasion.

One more feature documentary with subject the problems of Cyprus is Kipros E Alli Pragmatikotita (Cyprus the Other Reality) directed by Lambros Papademitrakis and Thekla Kittou. They discuss the problem without taking sides and show that both sides are paying as long as the problem continues unsolved. They propose that a just solution will be to the benefit of everyone, especially the victims.

Arkadi 1866 is one more feature documentary directed by Simeon Kapetanakis and is based on the heroic Cretan revolt and the critical event at the Arcadi monastery where the monks blew it up as Turkish soldiers rushed in to kill those seeking refuge inside.

A very interesting feature documentary in 1977 was Alexandros O Megas: Anamesa Stin Istoria Ke Ton Thrilo (Alexander the Great: Between the History and The Legend) directed by Nestor P. Matsas. It was filmed in twenty countries including Egypt, Russia, Lebanon, India, Persia, Iraq, Israel, Afghanistain, Asia Minor, and others. It recounts the life and activities of Alexander the Great who tried to united the world and educate them instead of conquering and enslaving them.
The director retraces the steps of Alexander’s army and tries to separate myth from fiction.

Pedia (Education), a feature documentary directed by Yannis Tipaldos. It is about the problems of education throughout the world.

A general research of a woman’s position in contemporary Greece is the feature documentary E Ginekes Simera (Women Today) directed by Pope Alkouli.

In 1978 the director Nestor Matsas again presented a feature documentary E Argo Taxidevi Panda (Argo Always Travels). It is a travelogue through history, myth, and art in Magna Grace, the colonies that flourished in Southern Italy and Sicily.

Parastasi Yia Ena Rolo (One Character Play) is a feature documentary directed by Dionisis Grigoratos. The subject is an analysis of Marxist philosophy and the involvement of foreign powers in Greek disputes, the complexities of arguments in World War I, the Asia Minor Defeat, World War II, and the ensuing Civil War and subsequent turbulence in domestic politics.

E Elikia Tis Thalassas (The Age of The Sea) is a feature documentary directed by Takis Papayannidis. It examines the domestic problems in policy which caused, among other things, the migration in search of jobs from the countryside to the large urban areas.

In 1979 the well known director Lila Kourkoulakou presented her second feature documentary Exodos Tou Mesologiou (Exodus of Mesologi), an examination of the famous event during the Greek Revolution of 1821.

In 1980, the director Pandelis Voulgaris presented his first feature documentary Eleftherios Venizelos, a political biography of the great Greek politician. It covers the same subject as Lila Kourkoulakou documentary Eleftherios Venizelos produced in 1965. This time the critics and the politicians disagree the way that the director Pandelis Voulgaris presented the historical events (Used of) between 1910 to 1927, the involvement by King Constantine, and the performance of Eleftherios Venizelos. Some expected a more heroic figure and others expected a less heroic one. Although it was a big production for its time, it unfortunately was financially unsuccessful.

E Diki Tis Houndas (The Junta Trial) directed by Theodosis Theodosopoulos. The subject is the trial of the dictators. It also presents the political events during the period of 1967-1974. But there is a part of the movie for a reason not altogether clears the behavior of the Greek army during the World War II, and other unproven suppositions of involvement of known politicians in political intrigue that goes beyond what is commonly accepted. The film is taking personal beliefs of the director and presents them as historical fact, a not too uncommon occurrence in this period of Greek history.

One more feature documentary is Aris Velouhiotis - The Dilemma, directed by Fitos Lambrinos. It is again a political history documentary for a leader of the military wing of the communist group called EAM (Ethnikon Apeleftherotikon Metopon -National Liberation Front). It examines the involvement of communists the country’s affairs and their failure during the 1944-1949 uprising to grab power. The director is searching to find out the reasons why their dream was lost. The facts speak for themselves. The director ignores the atrocities by people such as Aris Velouhiotis, particularly in the countryside where they used terror and Stalinist methods as an instrument of power. Not one of all the directors and writers who have made movies on the subject of the Civil War mention the tragic forced migration of 28 thousand children rounded up by the communists and taken behind the Iron Curtain for education and training so they can be used later against their own country.
Noteworthy in 1982 is the feature documentary E Azititi (The Unclaimed) directed by Kostis Zoes. It is a journey to the sanitarium island of Leros and a study in the life of the mentally ill, the methods of their therapy, the tragic picture and the agony of their life.

Another feature documentary is Document (The Document), directed by Tasos Lertas. It examines historical events during the period 1936-1944 from a leftist perspective. This type of subject has burned over the Greek screen and audiences reject films of this kind as indicated by the very low ticket sales.

The feature documentary Me Tin FlogaTis Irinis (With the Flame of Peace) was directed by Giorgos Anastasiadis and it chronicles the transfer of the Olympic Flame from Ancient Olympia to the United Nations in New York in 1982.

In 1983 Perseas is a feature documentary directed by Yannis Tritsibidas. It is based on a reconstruction of the ancient myth using modern traditional elements in the staging.

Istoria Tis Ellinikis Haraktikis (History of Greek Engraving) is a feature documentary directed by Gay Angeli. It is a historical presentation of the engraving art examining works in monasteries since the 18th century.

Ekklisies Ke Agiografies Tis Manis (Churches and Icons of Mani), is a short documentary directed by Eleftherios Haronitis. It examines historic church artwork in Mani, which is centuries old, but is now in a state of neglect.

In 1984 the director Demetris Arvanitis presented his short documentary O Sourealismos Stin Elliniki Zografiki (Surrealism in Greek Art/Painting) and is based in the life and work of four Greek surrealistic painters. In Thessalonikis Film Festival it received Best Short Movie Award and Special Award for short movies by PEKK (Pan-Hellenic Cinema Critics Union).

Tou Kolimviti (To the Swimmer) is a short documentary using animation directed by Stratos Stasinos, and Nikos Mirmiridis. It is based on a folk song under the same title.

In 1985 O Viasmos Tis Aphroditis (The Rape of Aphrodite) was released, it is a feature documentary directed by Andreas Ph. Pantzis. It chronicles the occupation of Cyprus by the British until the invasion by the Turks. A man who had left Cyprus for a while returned to his village in 1974 after the Turkish invasion and starts searching through the refugee camps for his relatives, among them his son and his wife. He feels like an immigrant in his own country. At the end of this journey, unable to endure this tense and depressed state of affairs, he enters the occupied part of Cyprus where he finds the graves of his son and his wife.

In 1986 several feature documentaries were based on the life of church saints. One noteworthy documentary that year also was Dominikos Theotokopoulos (Kyriakos Theotokopoulos), better known as (El Greco) (1541-1614). It was directed by Eleftherios Haronitis and is a biography of El Greco who was born in Crete. In 1560 El Greco moved to Venice and worked there for ten years next to the great painter Titian. Then for a short time he worked in Rome for Cardinal Alessandro Farness, later Pope Paul III. In 1576-77 he settled in Toledo, Spain. There he created masterpieces of religious art and other works which set him at the top tier of world artists of all time.

Several good short movies were made in 1987. One of those was Ta Arheamas Theatra (Our Ancient Theaters), a short documentary directed by Kostas Nastos. It is an analysis of the development of ancient theaters and a travelogue through some of the extant theaters.

The second one was Monaxia (Loneliness), a short movie, directed by Athanasios Papathanasiou. It describes the 24 hours in... the life and work of a film scriptwriter and his observations on human behavior and his psychological agony about the success of his work.

Some historical short movies and short documentaries were produced in 1988. One of those was Vizandina Aristourgimata Technis (Byzantine Masterpieces of Art), directed by Panos Kaloudas. It is a general historical review of Byzantine monuments in Attica, Argolis, and Thessalonika.

The second one was Grecia Capta, a short documentary directed by Demetris Mavrikios. It is a journey through the archaeological sites of South Italy in search of Greek ruins left there from prehistoric through contemporary times.

Also, the well-known work by the author Psiharis To Taxidi (The Journey), a short movie, directed by Nikos Hatzijanasiou on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of this literary figure of Modern Greece. The film refers to the book by Psiharis To Taxidi (The Journey).

Trimithi Anaparastasis Me Lexis (Representation of The Village Trimithi with Words), a feature documentary directed by Andreas Pantzis. The film goes back to the first village, Trimithi that the Turks entered when they occupied Cyprus in 1974 and through interviews captures the drama of the refugees who lost their homes and, in some cases, their loved ones. Now they cannot visit their homes but can only dream that some day they may get them back. Eye witnesses bring out the drama of the war.

In 1989, two short documentaries were produced with the same subject Ta Marmara Tou Parthenona (The Marbles of Parthenon). One was the short documentary directed by Stavros Ioannou which examines the history of the Parthenon Marbles and how they were removed and taken to London during the Turkish occupation.

The second one is Ta Marmara (The Marbles), a short documentary directed by Alexis Bistikas. In this, a man agonizes over the idea of the Parthenon Marbles when Minister of Culture Melina Mercury makes the case for their return to their original place.

A historical research was the short documentary Proistoriki Erevna Stin Ellada (Prehistoric Search in Greece) directed by Alida Demetriou. She examines the Paleolithic and Neolithic ages in Greece.

In 1990 Aenigma Est is a feature documentary directed by Demetris Mavrikios and examines the life and work of painter Giorgio de Chirico, (Volos 1888-Rome 1978). Through the paintings of the artist, the director travels through the places that were related in some way to the artist. Also, he analyzes the various writings of the artist, dwelling on what I should rather love, if I did not love the enigma? The artist traveled and lived in Athens, Ferrara, Florence, Munich, Paris, and died in Rome in 1978.

One other documentary about an artist is the documentary Nikos Kessanlis: To Portoeto Enos Zografou (Nikos Kessanlis, the Portrait of an Artist) directed by Nikos Fatouros. The artist himself appears in the film and talks about his work, while shots of his pictures are shown. Also, places he lived and worked in are depicted on the film.

Despina is a short movie, directed by Sotiris Goritsas. It analyzes the psychological behavior of twenty-year old Despina who wants to get away from her oppressive father and the boring life in her village. She dreams of life in the big city, Thessalonica. She met a young man who was doing his military service near Despina’s village and together they take off. After a while though, she faces the same oppressive situation with the soldier. Now again she tries to figure out how to get away again and find her freedom.
To Onomamou Ene Anna (My name is Anna), directed by Ersis Danou is a psychological drama of a young girl who has bad memories about her past. Her thoughts are always the same and she must make a decision how to finally face reality.

In 1991 Meteora, E Katakomves Tou Ouranou (Meteora, the Catacombs of Heaven); short documentary, directed by Vasilis Maros. It is a historical review of the unique monasteries of Meteora and their unusual natural beauty. Good direction is very apparent in the execution of the film.

The same year Politechnio (Polytechnic School), a short documentary with a political theme directed by Theodoros Maragkos. The film refers to the student rebellion against the dictatorship on November 1973, accusing the authorities of mishandling the situation and using violence against rioting students.

In 1992 a noteworthy feature documentary was Alvania Vimata Stin Eleftheria (Albania Steps into Freedom), directed by Maria Mavrikou. It is travelogue in a country that appears extremely backwards. The scars of the Communist dictator Enver Hotza’s regime of 45 years are clearly evident. It does not take but a few minutes to see the hunger, the depravation, the backwards living standards, and the difficulties traveling in the country. In more developed south you see the influences of the Greek civilization in ruins of ancient temples and theaters. In more backwards north, the living conditions are much more primitive. Very moving is the filming of the first free Christmas and interviews with and many local people.

In 1992 also several good short award winning movies were produced. One with the most awards, both domestic and international, was Runaway (short movie), directed by Spiros N. Taraviras. One of the awards it received was in Germany where it was selected from among 100 short movies as one of the 10 best. Its subject is young fugitive attempting to reach Florida to participate in a motorcycle competition. On the way he gets a job to raise the needed funds and develops a genuine friendship with his boss.

One more short movie To Petagma Tou Pelargou (The Flight of the Stork) directed by Vasilis Nakos. It participated in the Waterloo, France, and Film Festival and received the Grand Prix. It is about a kiosk man who spends his lifetime tending storks and preserving their nesting grounds.

In 1992 in the City of Drama Film Festival for short movies and short documentaries two short documentaries shared the Best Documentary Award and the Distinction Award by the Ministry of Culture. The first is Pirgos-Takis Sinopoulos directed by Achilleas Kiriakidis, and the second is Aiman, directed by Yannis Lambrou.

One more short movie directed by Spiros Taraviras was Deppelspiel (Duet/ Duo), and received the First Award for Movie With a Theme.

Also, Stadiaki Veltiosi Tou Kerou (Gradual Improvement of The Weather), a short documentary, was directed by Yannis Ekonomidis and received the “Best Short Movie With a Theme.”

In 1993 the director Nikos Anagnostopoulos presented his feature documentary Sta Prosopa Tis Anatolis Kimate O Chronos (Time Sleeps in Persons of the Orient). This documentary was filmed in Turkmenistan, southeast of the Caspian Sea and north of the Iran-Afghanistan border which is the confluence of several civilizations, including traditions brought there by Alexander the Great. The film tries to recognize traces of the past in the surviving songs from the past. This is also where the Zoroastrian religion developed and flourished. Certain tribes of this area believe they are the most ancient people in the world and are convinced that they are the descendants of Alexander the Great. The abundance of the archaeological evidence supports their claims.

Tha Figo (I Will Leave) is a feature documentary directed by Yanna Triandafilli. It deals with the subject of children with special needs and the mistreatment they suffer due to neglect by the responsible authorities. It examines the behavior and the daily activities of three handicapped children. Through their expressions and their eyes they send many messages to the audience about their condition, the suffering and the willpower to survive, even for a life of this kind.

Idiom Myth (Idiom Myths) a feature documentary released in 1994 and directed by Lefteris Haronitis. It deals with the archaeological work in the Cretan mountain of Ida where Zeus was born and was worshipped for many centuries. The importance of a cave in Ida was of significant importance in antiquity yet it has not been adequately explored till recently by archaeologist Yannis Sakellarakis under very difficult conditions due to the high altitude and the meager funds that were available. The study and evaluation of the finds unveil the scope of the Cretan, as well as the broader Mediterranean civilization.

Estin Oun Tragodia (The Origins of Tragedy) it was also released in 1994 and directed by Stavros Ioannou. The film examines the birth of tragedy from the myth of Dionysus in ancient Greece and its connection to folk traditions which still survive up to this day. Indeed, ethnographers of the 19th century who traveled throughout rural Greece have documented many traditions with roots in ancient times, which still survive. The film records some of these colorful events and happenings.

In 1995 the short documentary Tou Ieromonahou Damianou Paramithia (The Myths of Monk Damianos) directed by Makis Moraitis, deals with the presence of the Orthodox religion in Palestine and the travels of a monk who visits the sites and searches for the roots of Christianity where it all began.

Glendi Genethlion Mia Vouvi Valkan-iki Istorya (Birthday Party, a Silent Balkan Story) Directed by Fotos Lambrinos is a collage of film clips from the early days of silent cinema showing the story of various characters representative of the Balkan societies. Each of the three main characters comes from different countries: one from Bucharest, one from Constantinople, and one from Athens. All three of them were similarly oppressed by their respective societies. The bottom line is that, although they came from different societies, the similarities were more important than the differences.

Ola Ta Delina: To Nisi Ke O Gimnos Kolimvitis; (All The Afternoons: The Island and The Naked Swimmer), a feature documentary directed by Mathios Yamalakis. The film concentrates on the theme that the holy island of Patmos where the Apocalypse was written is still greatly influenced by the monasteries and the ancient myths. The civilian population and the island economy are very dependent on the monasteries as they did many centuries ago. In addition there are the tourists with their modern mode of behavior who live side by side with the unchanging monastic society.

Meri Amen, Anazitisi Se Tria Meri ke Ena Topo (Meri Amen searching in thee parts and one please) feature documentary directed by Thomas Moshopoulos searches for the roots of Alexander the Great in Egypt, where he had established one of the greatest cities in the Mediterranean, Alexandria. The Library of Alexandria became the research University of Antiquity. His quest for god brought him to the Egyptian priests, considered then the most informed on the subject.

O Thriamvos Tou Hronou (The Triumph of Time) is directed by Vasilis Mazonenos (feature documentary/Animation). He uses the technique of animation to present the great works of the Renaissance. Documents, engravings, sculptures, musical compositions and other artworks are presented and put in context. All these creations converge to end up as the Yalta Agreement!

Inepoli-Proen Ellas (Inepoli, Former Greece), directed by Nikos Davas, is a fanta-isy predicting conditions in the Balkans on year 2026. In the process, there more Balkan wars and the Balkans have been broken up into city-states. In the city-state of Inepoli, there is still going on the continuing clash of Islam and Christianity shown through terrorist organizations conducted by individuals.
The bottom line is nothing has changed after a quarter century.

In 1997 Epanastasis Tis Siopis (The Revolution of silence) was released and directed by Mirto Paraschi. Recounts the film maker’s personal odyssey to discover the sites of early Christianity in the Middle East.
Her journey takes her through the deserts of Egypt, Israel and Turkey where the early Church ascetics established their monasteries as the nuclei of the developing faith. These believers thought that their isolation would enhance their communication with God. The modern female film maker tries to come to terms with the absolute faith of these unusual people.

Epistrofi Tou Odysea (The Return of Ulysses) directed by Kostis Alefandis recounts the story of a young lady researching the life of the classical composer Nikos Skalkotas. Her trip takes her to the island of Tinos where the composer’s family roots begin and then to the various other cities where he lived and worked. She interviews people who knew him or knew of him through their close relatives. Finally, the concluding remarks summarize the essence of the research when his son states that to know his father is best to listen to his music, especially his work titled the “Return of Ulysses.”

Epirus, Arhegonos Greece (Epirus, Primordial Greece) directed by Maria Hatzimichali-Papaliou consists of five episodes, 25 minutes each. The film maker tries to tell the history of Epirus from the mythological times down to the 20th century as recorded in documents by various authors through the last 3000 years. The film includes a lot of footage from Albania all the way down to South West Greece.

Sinanos: Topografia Tis Mnimis (Si-asos-Memories of A Displaced Village) directed by Timon Koulmasis and Ero Siafliaki tells the story of the refugee exchange between Turkey and Greece where 1.5 million Greeks were displaced from the Eastern Aegean and Black Sea shores and 400 thousand Turks were sent back to Turkey from mainland Greece. The focus is on the village of Sinanos and what happened to its displaced refugees. Many of them are found and intervieved. The concluding point of the film is that these people had mingled amicably with other civilizations for many centuries but the propaganda and rise of nationalistic fervor of the 20th century destroyed their life.

Nihtoloulouda (Night Flowers); (feature documentary), it was released in 1998 and directed by Nikos Grammatikos. It explores the world of the vision-impaired children and their training so they can handle basic survival tasks. The film focuses on a 12-year old boy, blind since birth, and how he uses all his other senses to overcome his blindness. The viewer becomes more appreciative of his gift of vision and more sensitized to those who lack it.

Promitheas Enandiodromon (Prometheus Retrogressing); (feature documentary), directed by Kostas Sfikas, is a rereading of Aeschylus’s Prometheus Bound with emphasis on the rebellious character fighting higher authority and comparing this authority to the mighty authority of the modern state.
O Anthropos Pou Enohlise To Siban (The Man Who Disturbed the Universe); (feature documentary), directed by Stavros Psillakis, focuses on a mental hospital in Crete and the behavior of the inmates and the efforts by the staff to rehabilitate them. Another group of former inmates is tracked down to find how they manage their life out of the institution. The process is very painful and there is still a lot of work, and expense, needed to help these unfortunate individuals.

To Telos Tis Eoniotitas (The End of Eternity); (feature documentary), directed by Alexandros Lambridis is a visual essay on director Theo Angelopoulos and his triumph in winning the 1998 Palme d’Or for his film Eternity and a Day. The film shows how Angelopoulos goes about his work and his film-making process which helped him achieve the honor of being one of the greatest film-makers of Modern-day Greece.

In 1999 the feature documentary, Perasma Apo Ton Paradiso (Passages Through Paradise); was release and directed by Yannis Lambrou. It explores the life of monks in a typical monastery. Their life is devoted to faith through patience and toil within the brotherhood of other monks. Everything moves in silence of constantly moving forms but always remains the same.

The year 2000 several feature and short documentaries were released. One of those was Agelastos Petra (Mourning Rock); directed by Philippas Koutsaftis, is about the sacred site of Eleusis, and the myth of Demeter and her daughter Persephone. The myth was connected with the goddess of cultivation and fertility. This site and this myth is the basis of the Eleusinian mysteries, which was very important to the ancient Greeks. According to the legend, on this rock is where humanity received the knowledge and seed for cultivation of cereals.

To Spiti Tou Kain (The House of Cain); (feature documentary), directed by Christos Karakepelis, is a poetic treatment of the taking of human life and the criminal acts leading up to it. The film visits the sites involved in death: the prison, the morgue, the police, the courts, the penal colony, the streets where murders have been committed and the victims. Humanity has invested heavily in trying to prevent violent crime, unfortunately without success.

Edan Ta Matia Mas Giortes (Our Eyes Showed Celebrations /Released under the Title Mediterranean Stories); (feature documentary), directed by Stelios Haralabopoulos is an elegy of the Mediterranean landscape. The starkness, the sun, the sea have molded the people who created civilizations across widely separated areas. These people are different but in many respects similar. Their festivals, their buildings, their songs and dances are in many respects similar. The Mediterranean emerges a sea of convergence, confluence, and diversity where miraculous civilizations thrived.

M' Aresoun E Kardies San Ti Diki Mou; (I Like Hearts Like Mine /Markos Vamvakaris); (feature documentary), directed by Giorgos C. Zervas, is a portrait of one of the most prominent rebetiko composers, musicians, and singers with a unique style. The rebetiko, a great moment in neo-Greek culture is similar to the American blues. The film analyzes the creativity of Markos Vamvakaris and describes the environment which made him thrive.

Documentaries and short movies have a 40-year history. Key events in the development of these were the establishment of the Thessaloniki Festival in 1960, the First Pan-Hellenic Festival of Short Movies organized by the magazine of Synchronos Kinimatografas (Contemporary Cinema) in 1970, the establishment of the City of Drama Short Movie Festival in 1978, and some other less significant festivals for short movies. Also, contributing to the growth of short movie productions was the boom in TV and the establishment of the Greek Film Center supported by the Ministry of Culture. The Greek Film Center financed partially many new directors in this field.

From 1975 onwards, the involvement of women in all aspects of film production gave a big thrust to the industry. We notice that in this genre there is also an overproduction of films, analogous to what happened to feature films from 1960 to 1975. The number of films produced was disproportionately large to the population such that many of these could not be absorbed by the movie theaters and TV channels and were financial flops. Many of these participated in festivals but were never heard of again. To help the situation, Parliament passed a law in 1961 requiring that movie theaters play at least four short Greek movies each month. The law was never enforced. The question remains, why do the large majority of these productions become flops and have no international or domestic appeal? Another question is, is there a future for this type of film?

We hope that the new directors and scriptwriters will make better movies with international appeal. Greece is very rich in original subjects.

Trifon Tzavalas

The only son of Panayiotis and Sophia Tzavalas, Trifon was born in Athens in 1935. After graduating from the 8th Gymnasium for Boys, he enlisted in the Greek Air Force for his military service. Once out of the service, he worked next to the great film directors Giorgos Tzavelas and Vassilis Georgiadis who produced some of the classic films during the golden age of Greek cinema in the 50's and 60's.

Then Trifon decided he needed more film training and went to Germany, then to Montreal, and finally to Hollywood where his father's brother, William Chavalas, was the artistic director at 20th Century Fox designing film sets and movie theaters. W. Chavalas designed and decorated some of the finest movie theaters built in Los Angeles in the 1940's and 1950's. One of his monumental works is the Byzantine art of the church of Saint Sophia Greek Orthodox Cathedral in Los Angeles. Unfortunately, just before Trifon arrived in Los Angeles, his uncle suddenly died. In those early days, Trifon struggled to make a living while studying film direction at Columbia College. As a thesis project, he researched and wrote "The History of Greek Cinema". That thesis germinated into the 6-volume encyclopedic work, The History of Greek Cinema, which is now in this website. It took him practically the rest of his life to assemble the information for this publication. In the meantime, for relaxation, he wrote poems (a selection is included here).

He and his wife Maureen raised one son, Panayiotis, and dote on their three grandchildren: Sophia and the twins Triphon and Talia.

Due to his untimely illness, which to a great extent paralyzed Trifon in 2008, his friend Takis Demopoulos undertook the effort to edit and complete the publication. Zafiris Gourgouliatos assisted with the publication and web presentation. This electronic version of the book is published by the Hellenic University Club of Southern California, a Non-Profit Cultural Organization.

Advance Praise for
THE HISTORY OF GREEK CINEMA

“In this monumental work, Trifon Tzavalas lists each and every movie created from the beginning of Greek Cinema to the year 2000. This encyclopedia will help movie creators and historians in the 21st century and beyond.” — Zafiris Gourgouliatos, President of the Hellenic University Club of Southern California.
